

Of course, Freemasons and other initiates are not only depicted through signal photographs in newspapers. When a person is photographed only rarely, there is usually some kind of symbolism involved. Politicians and other initiates, who are photographed on an almost daily basis, will not always be captured with signs or symbols; it is only when the message is special that that will be indicated through their photographs or the accompanying text.

Signal photographs are, incidentally, never used to provide false information deliberately. If that were the case, the Illuminati would only confuse its own members and it would devalue the sign language! There is no need to do so because the number of people who are able to understand the messages remains very small.
